In 1994 the NSW Government announced the "Fee for Service" initiative to reduce public funding of health costs and place the responsibility of productivity back on the health provider.

The Hawkesbury Hospital at Windsor is an early, successful example of the fee for service concept in operation.

APP was commissioned by CHC Australia to advise and manage the 127 bed district hospital development at Windsor.

The scope of work included being involved from inception in a client advisory role and technical manager of the total project to completion of the hospital's commissioning and handover in August 1996. Due to the complex and high risk nature of the tender let by the NSW Government, APP and CHC Australia were required to devise a close working relationship that would allow APP to minimise all aspects of project risk.

The relationship was so successful the project was completed five months ahead of schedule with no variations being lodged.
